Carson Huey-You

Huey-You came to TCU as an 11-year-old who was co-valedictorian of his senior class at the Accommodated Learning Academy in Grapevine. He scored 1770 on the SAT, played the piano and studied Chinese. At TCU, Carson found a tight-knit community that encourages faculty-student interaction and personal attention. Huey-You plans to enter graduate school in the fall to work toward a master's degree in physics.

Caylin L. Moore

Moore is one of 32 Rhodes Scholars who will study next fall at Oxford University, where he will begin graduate studies in public policy and business administration. Moore overcame a number of obstacles to earn an academic scholarship to TCU. He began his undergraduate studies at Marist College in New York, where he also played football. He transferred to TCU before the start of the 2015 season and was a safety on the Horned Frogs football team.

TCU's Three Fulbright Finalists

Alumnus Philip Antinone and graduating seniors Nicholas Barnette and Kally Nord join approximately 1,900 other U.S. citizens who will teach, conduct research and provide expertise abroad as part of the Fulbright Program. The program offers one of the top scholarships in the world, and TCU boasts nearly three dozen recipients of the prestigious award since 1965, with more than 24 since 2010.

Philip Antinone

Antinone, who graduated in December 2016 as a John V. Roach Honors Laureate with a bachelor's degree in music education, will teach English in Italy. He hopes to use his teaching experience and Italian minor to "inspire his students to develop their second language" and "create an academic year of growth and cultural exchange." Antinone plans to pursue a Doctorate of Ministry and pastor a church in Italy while teaching English classes.

Nicholas Barnette

Barnette will teach performance and theater to young students in Greece, "expanding pre-existing drama and debate extracurricular programs to include comedy writing and performance workshops." Barnette is working to complete degrees in English and film, TV and digital media, as well as his departmental Honors project, a memoir told through poems and essays. Upon completion of his teaching position, Barnette plans to pursue a master's degree in creative writing and teach at the collegiate level.

Kally Nord

An early childhood education major, Nord will use her English as a second language and bilingual specialization to create a rich cultural experience for her students in Spain. She plans to implement weekly service projects with her students and "create unity through shared language and action." Nord wants to be an elementary school teacher upon completion of her Fulbright program.
